AGRICULTURISTS HOLD MEETING

Country Horses Race at Calder's Park for Country People.

GOOD SPORT FOR EVERYONE

SULKIES, DRIVERS AND JOCK-EYS FROM FARMS.

"By gum, there goes Dromadary, now, he'll win; he'il win. Hurry up, Cy, hurry up; gosh darn'd if I ain't going to win

'Of course I did, son."

'Hooray, hooray, dad's going to win his A few minutes later, or what seemed ours later, a sorrowful looking nag came trudging down the stretch and our coun-try friend fell out of the judges' stand strutted up the track stepping higher than a bantam rooster on a bright spring morning to embrace the driver who had driven Dromadary. He was followed by his son, who pointed out his father to the other kids, as the man who had won money on the horse race. The amount involved was one dollar, the place was Calder's track and the time was yesterday afternoon.

Country Day at Calder's.

Country Day at Calder's and the farmer and his family, together with the family horse, furnished the amusement. Whether the farmer or the horses afforded the greatest amount of sport depends entirely upon the part of the state where a person votes. To those who chaily follow the form sheets and read the national circuit summaries, the agriculturalists were far more spirited than the noble horse whose daily diet is earned in close communion with the plow.

The county had been ransacked for sulkies and seme were pressed into use which served in the handcart brigade of '47. To these were hitched the pick of the county's horses, probably none carrying a strain of Hambletonian blood, but horses that are the bone and sinew of Where Dromedary Won.

A mile in 2:45 was the fastest heat of the day, while a 3:14 mile captured the last and most interesting heat of the afternoon. It was in the last race that Dromadary lost his reputation, after electrifying the crowd by winning a race in starters. All of them broke and acted as if they had heard the dinner bell for quitting time. Dromadary broke first, then got his second wind and came down the siretch a winner in the first heat. It was at this time that the agricultural turf plunger embraced the driver. However. Dromadary had run his race, and save way to younger and horses fairer to look upon in the next two heats.

A howl was raised in the quarter-mile dash because some of the farmers had secured the services of city jockeys to ride, and after the race was over a protest was entered against Blackhawk. It was proved that his rider was familiar with the dope sheet at the stock exchange, and the race was declared off. The Judges then declared that none but since pure country boys could ride, which pleased the people and which also banged the result of the race considerably.
